H&W Computer Systems announces Day One support for z/OS 1.13

BOISE, Idaho — September 30, 2011 — H&W Computer Systems (H&W) today announced Day One support for its software running under IBM's z/OS[®] operating system, version 1.13. This support is available for H&W's SYSB-II[®], SYSD[®], CPMS[®], WebTek[®], SYSS[®], SYSJ[®], and SYSM[®] software. H&W provides Day One support as part of the ongoing investment in its software to ensure the greatest value for customers and prospects.

"H&W is committed to supporting its customers' mission-critical business processes by providing high-quality enterprise software," said Richard Newman, chief technology officer. "With Day One support, our customers can be confident that H&W software will be ready whenever they upgrade to IBM's newest release of z/OS."

An IBM Advanced Business Partner, H&W participates in the IBM vendor program so it can offer Day One support. "Investing in Day One support is one way that H&W upholds its longstanding reputation among customers for excellent software and service," said Greg Collier, manager of customer relationship strategy. "Our first priority is always making sure we meet or exceed customer expectations in these arenas."

H&W's enterprise software is a key contributor to many organizations' business and IT operations. "Our customers rely on H&W software to provide business services to their external and internal customers," said Collier. "We're always looking for new ways to help them meet business goals in a better or more timely manner. That can mean making enhancements to software they already license or finding new solutions to their most pressing business issues."
