H&W Computer Systems president to assume CEO role

BOISE, Idaho – January 5, 2016 – H&W Computer Systems (H&W) has announced that Matt Link is becoming CEO, effective immediately. Link will continue in his current role of president.

“I’m pleased to be taking on the role of CEO at this time in the company’s history,” said Link. “I’ve had the chance through the 18 years I’ve been with H&W to see it grow and evolve. The organization has been flourishing, and I’m excited about the potential its future holds.”

As CEO, Link will guide the strategic direction of H&W. This is in addition to his responsibilities for overseeing the day-to-day operations, which he acquired when he became president in 2014. “As CEO and president, I’ll strive to keep the company on the prosperous path that it has been following up to now,” said Link. “Everything we do has always been focused on the customer. That’s definitely a tradition that will continue.”

As H&W enters its 37th year, Link aims to build on the core of the company. “I’ll never forget that H&W’s customers and employees are at the heart of H&W. I’m truly looking forward to beginning this new era with them, and to the challenges and rewards ahead.”
